Year 13 Geographers should be well underway with their NEA. The bulk of their work should be on google docs, so that we can monitor progress. I've told the students that I will be looking through over the weekend. I've asked them to be proactive and say if they are having major problems - I would consider if primary data has not been collected, this would be a major problem.

They have access to the document from the RGS that they need to follow step by step in order to complete their coursework. I expect that they should have completed the introduction and methodology, they should be compiling a bibliography and reference list from a wide variety of sources. Some may be near to completion, with data presented to a high standard, statistics used, clear analysis and conclusions reached. Importantly, the enquiry they produce should make sense, if you read it, you should think that it could be easily replicated. Again how to set it out is in the RGS booklet, as well as how to reference.

Any questions please contact Mr. McKeand or myself by email or via synergy.
